Q

I am sick and tired of Covid restrictions, of everyone being cranky and my ex not pulling his weight on the days he is home-schooling the kids! Help!

A

We all are “Covid-fatigued” and anxious to return to the “good old days”, pre-Covid-19.

This is the first time our generation has faced such a challenge, but it is not the first such challenge requiring sustained sacrifices.

In the fall of 1942 Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the U.S. President, toured Britain, which was in its third year of food rationing, no heat in homes until November 1st, and other privations.

Eleanor wrote to Queen Elizabeth after the trip.

The Queen responded: “Sometimes one’s heart seems near breaking under the stress of so much sorrow and anxiety.” We also feel sorrow and anxiety, worried about our jobs, our businesses, our children and especially the health of our loved ones.

Eleanor reflected in her daily column that she came back “...with an enormous pride in the ability of human nature to rise above the things that bother most – the little things. When you have to face things, you can!”

Keep on masking, washing, and staying safe. Have the courage “...to live our lives in the belief that the sacrifices of today are made for the good of humanity in the future”, as Eleanor claimed.

Have hope and faith that someday soon this will be a distant memory. In the meantime, have a chat with your ex and confirm via email, that if he is unwilling to keep up with the children’s schoolwork during his time with them, that such a schedule may have to change during home-schooling. If you need some assistance with this, contact a Family lawyer, we can help.
